This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. TO WOMAN.

I 'll tell thee a part
Of the thoughts that start
To being when thou art nigh;
And thy beauty, more bright
Than the stars' soft light,
Shall seem as a weft from the sky.

PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY.

INTRODUCTORY.

FOR centuries the mute stone face of the Sphinx — the accepted symbol of the unknown, the mysterious — has looked out over the wilderness; and generations have puzzled their brains over her riddle. But conjecture has been unavailing; the secret of the strange creation of Egyptian fancy is undetermined.

Woman is the enigma of the ages, — the world's sphinx. Men always have been, are, and ever will be guessers of her secret; but after centuries of thought, all one finds is a mass of contradictory statements, which one may liken to the sands that have been worn from the dumb sentinel of the desert. Woman is to-day unknown, a creature for surmise and speculation, — what Amiel has been pleased to call the "monster incomprehensible."

With all their wooing and worshipping, men have looked at their divinity but to differ in opinion. Lessing thought God meant to make woman his masterpiece, and Milton deemed her a fair defect of nature; Shakespeare calls her another name for frailty, and Holmes thinks her the Messiah of a new faith. To one she has seemed divine, and to another satanic. Where shall we draw the line between dangerous extremes? Who shall draw it? The fabled mariner who sought the open channel between Scylla and Charybdis had an easy task compared with that of the sex-casuist of to-day.

Literature is full of opinions, wise or otherwise, on woman's nature and character; but thinkers have been prone, as the following pages show, to sin on the side of panegyric or of wilful libel. Wherein lie woman's power and her weakness? Do her graces and charms make her a ministering angel or an instrument of evil? Has she the purity, the gentleness, the self-sacrificing spirit, that make her divine, or is she the incarnation of waywardness and wickedness, spite, fickleness, folly? One has but to search the records of thought, and he will find opinions to suit any preconceived notion he may entertain.

This little book advances no theories. It simply furnishes the raw material for theorizing by supplying some of the opinions or guesses of men about women and of women about themselves. The reader will find variety, wit, brilliancy, humor, wise aphorisms, and what he will doubtless deem senseless, if not profane, criticisms. Many times and climes are represented, and many types of thought and fancy expressed. The aim has been to gather together in convenient form the best things said in praise or condemnation of women; and the sharp contrasts afforded will probably be found not less entertaining and instructive than the views advanced, and the bright, epigrammatic form in which they are cast.

Little liberty has been taken with the text of the authors quoted. In a very few — perhaps not more than half a dozen — of the short passages given, the word woman, or women, has been substituted for the personal pronoun she or they, to avoid the necessity of transcribing half a page of context that would be out of keeping with the scope and purpose of the book. The translations are as literal as possible. In some cases quotations have been marked anonymous, because they have been culled from the great mass of what may be termed floating literature, and their authorship has been difficult to trace. A more careful search might have revealed the source of some of these passages, but this would scarcely have added to their worth. Care has been taken to make the indexes full and comprehensive, for convenience of reference. Much that is racy will be found in the pages following, but nothing, it is thought, that will be considered objectionable.

That women have been carefully inspected through both ends of the telescope will readily be seen. The reader may claim allegiance to those who belittle or those who glorify, as he pleases. This much, however, is certain: crown or crucify his divinity as he may, worship her he must.

WOMAN IN EPIGRAM.

I.

SECOND thoughts are best. God created man; woman was the afterthought.

PROVERB.

I HAVE been ready to believe that we have even now a new revelation, and the name of its Messiah is Woman.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

THE whisper of a beautiful woman can be heard farther than the loudest call of duty.

ANONYMOUS.

THROUGH all the drama, whether damned or not,
Love gilds the scene, and women guide the plot. RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN.

THE man who enters his wife's dressing-room is either a philosopher or a fool.

HONORÉ DE BALZAC.

Two women plac'd together makes cold weather.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

A WOMAN'S low, soft sympathy
Comes like an angel's voice to teach us how to die.

EDWIN ARNOLD.

I HAVE seen many instances of women running to waste and self-neglect, and disappearing gradually from the earth, almost as if they had been exhaled to heaven.

WASHINGTON IRVING.

To a woman, the romances she makes are more amusing than those she reads.

THÉOPHILE GAUTIER.

IN spite of all the virtue we can boast,
The woman that deliberates is lost.

JOSEPH ADDISON.

WOMEN give themselves to God when the devil wants nothing more to do with them.

SOPHIE ARNOULD.

SENSUALISM intrudes into the education of young women, and withers the hope and affection of human nature.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

ALL the reasoning of man is not worth one sentiment of woman.

FRANÇOIS MARIE AROUET DE VOLTAIRE.

WHEN an old crone frolics, she flirts with death. PUBLIUS SYRUS.

THERE never was in any age such a wonder to be found as a dumb woman.
T. MACCIUS PLAUTUS.

WIVES are young men's mistresses, companions for middle age, and old men's nurses. FRANCIS BACON.

TENDERNESS has no deeper source than the heart of a woman, devotion no purer shrine, sacrifice no more saint-like abnegation.
GERMAIN FRANÇOIS POULLAIN DE SAINT-FOIX.

IT is not for good women that men have fought battles, given their lives, and staked their souls. MRS. W. K. CLIFFORD.

WOMAN'S sympathies give a tone, like the harp of Æolus, to the slightest breath.
DONALD G. MITCHELL.

THO' Wisdom oft has sought me,
I scorn'd the lore she brought me;
My only books
Were woman's looks,
And folly 's all they 've taught me.
THOMAS MOORE.

A COQUETTE is a woman who places her honor in a lottery; ninety-nine chances to one that she will lose it. ANONYMOUS.

OH, why did God create at last
This novelty on earth, this fair defect
Of nature? JOHN MILTON.

LADIES, whose love is constant as the wind;
Cits, who prefer a guinea to mankind.
EDWARD YOUNG.

THE honor of woman is badly guarded when it is guarded by keys and spies. No woman is honest who does not wish to be.
ANTOINE DUPUY.

THE man that lays his hand upon a woman, save in the way of kindness, is a wretch whom 't were gross flattery to name a coward.
JOHN TOBIN.

BEAUTY deceives women in making them establish on an ephemeral power the pretensions of a whole life. SIMON DE BIGINCOURT.

I DO not know that she was virtuous; but she was ugly, and, with a woman, that is half the battle. HEINRICH HEINE

MOST women caress sin before embracing penitence.

JEAN GASPARD DUBOIS-FONTANELLE.

HEAVEN has no rage like love to hatred turned,
Nor hell a fury like a woman scorned.

WILLIAM CONGREVE.

WHEN Eve ate the apple, she knew she was naked. I have often thought, as I looked at her dancing daughters, that another bite would be of service to them. FREDERICK SHELDON.

WOMAN is a creature between man and the angels. HONORÉ DE BALZAC.

EDUCATION raises many poor women to a stage of refinement that makes them suitable companions for men of a higher rank, and not suitable for those of their own.

WILLIAM EDWARD HARTPOLE LECKY.

ELEGANCE of appearance, ornaments, and dress, — these are women's badges of distinction; in these they delight and glory.

TITUS LIVIUS.

MEN, who paint sylphs, fall in love with some bonne et brave femme, heavy-heeled and freckled. GEORGE ELIOT.

WOMAN — the gods be thanked! — is not even collaterally related to that sentimental abstraction called an angel.

JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE.

GOD bless all good women! To their soft hands and pitying hearts we must all come at last. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

NEITHER education nor reason gives women much security against the influence of example. SAMUEL JOHNSON.

THE hell for women who are only handsome is old age. CHARLES DE SAINT-EVREMOND.

MEN are women's playthings; women are the devil's. VICTOR HUGO.

A WOMAN, if she is bent on ill, never goes begging to the gardener for material; she has a garden at home.

T. MACCIUS PLAUTUS.

THE woman in us still prosecutes a deceit like that begun in the garden; and our understandings are wedded to an Eve as fatal as the mother of their miseries.

JOSEPH GLANVILL.

AMONG all animals, from man to the dog, the heart of a mother is always a sublime thing. ALEXANDRE DUMAS, père.

THERE are no ugly women; there are only women who do not know how to look pretty. ANTOINE PIERRE BERRYER.

As for the women, though we scorn and flout 'em,
We may live with, but cannot live without 'em. JOHN DRYDEN.

A WOMAN, impudent and mannish grown,
Is not more loathed than an effeminate man
In time of action. WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

THE souls of women are so small,
That some believe they 've none at all.
SAMUEL BUTLER.

WOMEN call repentance the sweet remembrance of their faults, and the bitter regret of their inability to recommence them.
MARQUIS DE BEAUMANOIR.

A WOMAN'S friendship is, as a rule, the legacy of love or the alms of indifference.
ANONYMOUS.

NOR shall the poor beauty which the mother has retained, by dint of being no mother, be lovely as the ruin. LEIGH HUNT.

IT is rare that, after having given the key of her heart, a woman does not change the lock the day after.

CHARLES AUGUSTIN SAINTE-BEUVE.

WOMEN complain of the lack of virtue in men, and do not esteem those who are too strictly virtuous. PIERRE JACQUES BLONDEL.

A WOMAN'S counsel brought us first to woe. JOHN DRYDEN.

LOVE is woman's teacher, developer, guardian. It sheds light upon her past as well as her future. Seeing what she has escaped, she learns what to shun.

JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE.

THE YOUNG GIRL'S HEART.

YOU will learn later in life that the heart of a modest, gentle girl is a very hard matter for even a brother to probe; it is at once the most tender and the most unapproachable of all fastnesses. It admits feeling by armies, with great trains of artillery, but not a single scout. It is as calm and pure as polar snows; but deep underneath, where no footsteps have gone, and where no eye can reach but one, lies the warm and the throbbing earth. Make what you will of the slight, quivering blushes and of the half-broken expressions, — more you cannot get. The love that a delicate-minded girl will tell is a short-sighted and outside love; but the love that she cherishes without voice or token is a love that will mould her secret sympathies and her deepest, fondest yearnings, either to a quiet world of joy or to a world of placid sufferance. The true voice of her love she will keep back long and late, fearful ever of her most prized jewel, — fearful to strange sensitiveness: she will show kindness, but the opening of the real floodgates of the heart and the utterance of those impassioned yearnings which belong to its nature come far later. That deep, thrilling voice, bearing all the perfume of the womanly soul in its flow, rarely finds utterance; and if vainly, — if called out by tempting devices, and by a trust that is abused, — desolate indeed is the maiden heart, widowed of its chastest thought. The soul shrinks affrighted within itself. Like a tired bird lost at sea, fluttering around what seem friendly boughs, it stoops at length, and finding only cold, slippery spars, with no bloom and no foliage, its last hope gone, it sinks to a wild ocean grave.

DONALD G. MITCHELL.

II.

To love, to marry, to rear a family, is by no means an entire statement of the obligations and privileges of women, because no woman always has lover, husband, or children; many fail to have all of them in succession, and a few never have either of them.

WILLIAM ROUNSEVILLE ALGER.

WOMEN are intellectually more desultory and volatile than men; they are more occupied with particular instances than with general principles; they judge rather by intuitive perceptions than by deliberate reasoning or past experience.

WILLIAM EDWARD HARTPOLE LECKY.

No woman is too silly not to have a genius for spite.

ANONYMOUS.

THERE is no compensation for the woman who feels that the chief relation of her life has been a mistake. She has lost her crown.

GEORGE ELIOT.

THERE are plenty of women who believe women to be incapable of anything but to cook, incapable of interest in affairs.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

GOSSIPING like crazy old women, chattering with toothless gums and silly brains about the dreams and joys of their youth, yet unable to recall one single thought or feeling with that vigor which once gave it life and truth.

MAX MÜLLER.

A WOMAN is happy, and attains all that she desires, when she captivates a man; hence the great object of her life is to master the art of captivating men.

COUNT LYOF N. TOLSTOÏ.

THE secret of youthful looks in an aged face is easy shoes, easy corsets, and an easy conscience. ANONYMOUS.

WHO does not know the bent of woman's fancy? EDMUND SPENSER.

THE girl who wakes the poet's sigh is a very different creature from the girl who makes his soup. FREDERICK SHELDON.

WOMEN know a point more than the devil.

ITALIAN PROVERB.

YOU may chisel a boy into shape, as you would a rock, or hammer him into it, if he be of a better material, as you would a piece of bronze. But you cannot hammer a girl into anything. JOHN RUSKIN.

To a gentleman every woman is a lady in right of her sex. EDWARD BULWER-LYTTON.

DID you ever hear of a man's growing lean by the reading of "Romeo and Juliet," or blowing his brains out because Desdemona was maligned? OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

GREAT women belong to history and to self-sacrifice. LEIGH HUNT.

IN little duties women find their sphere, —
The narrow cares that cluster round the hearth. RICHARD HENRY STODDARD.

THE heart of a coquette is like a rose, of which the lovers pluck the leaves, leaving only the thorns for the husband.
ANONYMOUS.

IN our age women commonly preserve the publication of their good offices and their vehement affection toward their husbands until they have lost them.
MICHAEL DE MONTAIGNE.

WHEN women cannot be revenged, they do as children do, — they cry.

JEROME CARDAN.

FRIENDSHIP between two women is always a plot against each other.

ALPHONSE KARR.

DIVERT your mistress, rather than sigh for her. SIR RICHARD STEELE.

AND this is woman's fate:
All her affections are called into life
By winning flatteries, and then thrown back
Upon themselves to perish. L. E. LANDON.

THE ever-womanly draws us above.

JOHANN WOLFGANG VON GOETHE.

I LOVE men, not because they are men, but because they are not women.

QUEEN CHRISTINA.

FLOW, wine! smile, women! and the universe is consoled. PIERRE JEAN BÉRANGER.

OUR good wife sets up a sail according to the keel of her husband's estate; and if of high parentage, she doth not so remember what she was by birth that she forgets what she is by match. THOMAS FULLER.

WOMEN, born to be controlled,
Stoop to the forward and the bold.

EDMUND WALLER.

DISCRETION is more necessary to women than eloquence, because they have less trouble to speak well than to speak little.

FATHER DU BOSC.

THERE is no gown or garment that worse becomes a woman than when she will be wise. MARTIN LUTHER.

WOMEN live only in the emotion that love gives. ARSÈNE HOUSSAYE.

ON great occasions it is almost always women who have given the strongest proofs of virtue and devotion. COUNT MONTHOLON.

THERE is in every true woman's heart a spark of heavenly fire, which beams and blazes in the dark hours of adversity.

WASHINGTON IRVING.

A WOMAN is never displeased if we please several other women, provided she is preferred. It is so many more triumphs for her. NINON DE LENCLÓS.

THERE is a woman at the beginning of all great things. ALPHONSE DE LAMARTINE

WOMAN!
Destructive, damnable, deceitful woman!
THOMAS OTWAY.

WOMEN prefer us to say a little evil of them, rather than to say nothing of them at all.
ANTOINE RICARD.

ONE syllable of woman's speech can dissolve more of love than a man's heart can hold. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

WOMEN, deceived by men, want to marry them; it is a kind of revenge, as good as any other. MARQUIS DE BEAUMANOIR.

A WOMAN is seldom tenderer to a man than immediately after she has deceived him. ANONYMOUS.

I NEED not repeat to you — your own solitude will suggest it — that a masculine woman is not strong, but a lady is. The loneliest thought, the purest prayer, is rushing to be the history of a thousand years.
RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

THE fire of woman's passion, consuming the wilderness of her limitation, rises to the pure flame that has blazed on every altar of Eros between the Nile and the Columbia.
JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE.

THERE remains in the faces of women who are naturally serene and peaceful, and of those rendered so by religion, an after-spring, and later, an after-summer, — the reflex of their most beautiful bloom.

JEAN PAUL RICHTER.

FRAILTY ! thy name is woman.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

THE tears of a young widow lose their bitterness when wiped by the hands of love.

ANONYMOUS.

SHE could not reconcile the anxieties of spiritual life, involving eternal consequences, with a keen interest in gimp and artificial protrusions of drapery. GEORGE ELIOT.

VENUS herself, if she were bald, would not be Venus. APULEIUS.

WOMEN often deceive to conceal what they feel; men, to simulate what they do not feel, — love. ERNEST WILFRID LEGOUVÉ.

WOMEN are the happiest beings of the creation; in compensation for our services they reward us with a happiness of which they retain more than half.

BERNARD DE VARENNES.

PSYCHE discovered her beauty in a quiet pool of water; and the first peep into Nature's mirror was the birth of vanity.

FREDERICK W. MORTON.

WOMAN seldom hesitates to sacrifice the honest man who loves her without pleasing her, to the libertine who pleases her without loving her. ANTOINE RICARD.

A WOMAN'S power lies in her petticoats, as Samson's strength lay in his hair; cut them off, and you leave her at the mercy of every brutal Philistine who now dares not be rude to her because she is sacred.

FREDERICK SHELDON.

EARTH'S noblest thing, a woman perfected.

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL.

WHAT could a woman's head contrive, which she would not know how to excuse?

GOTTHOLD EPHRAIM LESSING.

REVELATION IN WOMEN'S FACES.

Now, among the visible objects which hint to us fragments of this infinite secret for which our souls are waiting, the faces of women are those that carry the most legible hieroglyphics of the great mystery. There are women's faces, some real, some ideal, which contain something in them that becomes a positive element in our creed, so direct and palpable a revelation is it of the infinite purity and love. I remember two faces of women with wings, such as they call angels, of Fra Angelico, — and I just now came across a print of Raphael's Santa Apollina, with something of the same quality, — which I was sure had their prototypes in the world above ours. No wonder the Catholics pay their vows to the Queen of Heaven! The unpoetical side of Protestantism is, that it has no women to be worshipped. But mind you, it is not every beautiful face that hints the Great Secret to us, nor is it only in beautiful faces that we find traces of it. Sometimes it looks out from a sweet sad eye, the only beauty of a plain countenance; sometimes there is so much meaning in the lips of a woman, not otherwise fascinating, that we know they have a message for us, and wait almost with awe to hear their accents. But this young girl has at once the beauty of feature and the outspoken mystery of expression. Can she tell me anything?

Is her life a complement of mine, with the missing element in it which I have been groping after through so many friendships that I have tired of, and through — Hush! Is the door fast? Talking loud is a bad trick in these curious boarding-houses.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

III.

As soon as women are ours, we are no longer theirs. MICHAEL DE MONTAIGNE.

A WOMAN laughs when she can, and weeps when she will. PROVERB.

WOMAN may complain to God, as subjects do of tyrant princes; but otherwise she hath no appeal in the causes of unkindness.
JEREMY TAYLOR.

A BACHELOR seeks a wife to avoid solitude; a married man seeks society to avoid a tête-à-tête. BERNARD DE VARENNES.

NAY, certainly, I know the ways of women; they won't when thou wilt, and when thou won't they are passionately fond.
P. TERENTIUS AFER.

HONOR to women! To them it is given
To garden the earth with the roses of heaven.
FRIEDRICH VON SCHILLER.

SILENCE and blushing are the eloquence of women. CHINESE PROVERB.

I 'VE seen your stormy seas and stormy women,
And pity lovers rather more than seamen.
LORD BYRON.

A WOMAN who has not seen her lover for the whole day considers that day lost for her; the tenderest of men considers it only lost for love. MADAME DE SALM.

THE revolution the Boston boys started had to run in woman's milk before it ran in man's blood. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

WOMEN swallow at one mouthful the lie that flatters, and drink drop by drop the truth that is bitter. DENIS DIDEROT.

A SHAMELESS woman is the worst of men.
EDWARD YOUNG.

THERE has been no church, however superstitious, that has not been adorned by many Christian women devoting their entire lives to assuaging the sufferings of men.
WILLIAM EDWARD HARTPOLE LECKY.

I DARE say she 's like the rest of the women, — thinks two and two 'll come to make five, if she cries and bothers enough about it.
GEORGE ELIOT.

WE need the friendship of a man in great trials, of a woman in the affairs of every-day life. ANTOINE LÉONARD THOMAS.

THERE never were so many morally baffled, uneasy, and complaining women on the earth as now, because never before did the capacities of intelligence and affection so greatly exceed their gratification.

WILLIAM ROUNSEVILLE ALGER.

WOMEN never reason; or, if they do, they either draw correct inferences from wrong premises or wrong inferences from correct premises; and they always poke the fire from the top. BISHOP RICHARD WHATELY.

HOW can one who hates men love a woman without blushing? JEAN PAUL RICHTER.

IN the highest society, as well as in the lowest, woman is merely an instrument of pleasure. COUNT LYOF N. TOLSTOÏ.

THOSE females who cry out loudest against the flightiness of their sisters, and rebuke their undue encouragement of this man or that, would do as much themselves if they had the chance.

WILLIAM MAKEPEACE THACKERAY.

WOMEN know at first sight the character of those with whom they converse. There is much to give them a religious height to which men do not attain.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

WOMEN see through and through each other; and often we most admire her whom they most scorn. CHARLES BUXTON.

WOMAN is a miracle of divine contradictions.

JULES MICHELET.

BEFORE going to war say a prayer; before going to sea say two prayers; before marrying say three prayers. PROVERB.

ONE should choose for a wife only such a woman as he would choose for a friend, were she a man. JOSEPH JOUBERT.

WOMAN is a fickle and changeful thing.

P. VIRGILIUS MARO.

To educate a man is to form an individual who leaves nothing behind him; to educate a woman is to form future generations.

EDOUARD RENÉ LEFÉBURE LABOULAYE.

THERE are no women to whom virtue comes easier than those who possess no attractions. ANONYMOUS.

IN courting women, many dry wood for a fire that will not burn for them.

HONORÉ DE BALZAC.

"MOST women have no characters at all," —
Matter too soft a lasting mark to bear.

ALEXANDER POPE.

IT is no more possible to do without a wife than it is to dispense with eating and drinking. MARTIN LUTHER.

GOD created the coquette as soon as he had made the fool. VICTOR HUGO.

THE sweetest thing in life is the unclouded welcome of a wife.

NATHANIEL PARKER WILLIS.

WHO to a woman trusts his peace of mind
Trusts a frail bark with a tempestuous wind.

GEORGE GRANVILLE.

TRUST not a woman, even when dead.

LATIN PROVERB.

I HAVE seen more than one woman drown her honor in the clear water of diamonds.

COMTESSE D'HOUDETOT.

IN all eras and all climes a woman of great genius or beauty has done what she chose. OUIDA.

HE that hath wife and children hath given hostages to fortune; for they are impediments to great enterprises, either of virtue or mischief. FRANCIS BACON.

A WOMAN would be in despair if Nature had formed her as fashion makes her appear. MLLE. DE LESPINASSE.

THE resistance of a woman is not always a proof of her virtue, but more frequently of her experience. NINON DE LENCLOS.

WHAT a wilful, wayward thing is woman! Even in their best pursuits so loose of soul that every breath of passion shakes their frame. PHILIP FRANCIS.

THE love of woman is universally for one man. Even though degraded, half-unsexed, outcast, abandoned to despair, she inflexibly seeks her individual own.

JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE.

IMPERIOUS Venus is less potent than caressing Venus. ANONYMOUS.

THE clown knows very well that the women are not in love with him, but with Hamlet, the fellow in the black cloak and plumed hat. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

Do you not know I am a woman? when I think, I must speak.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

WOMEN, asses, and nuts require strong hands. ITALIAN PROVERB.

WOMAN sends forth her sympathies on adventure. She embarks her whole soul in the traffic of affection; and if shipwrecked, her case is hopeless. WASHINGTON IRVING.

GOD! she is like a milk-white lamb, that bleats
For man's protection. JOHN KEATS.

A WOMAN is sometimes fugitive, irrational, indeterminable, illogical, and contradictory. A great deal of forbearance ought to be shown her. HENRI FRÉDÉRIC AMIEL.

WHAT a strange illusion it is to suppose that beauty is goodness! A beautiful woman utters absurdities; we listen, and we hear not the absurdities, but wise thoughts.

COUNT LYOF N. TOLSTOÏ.

WOMAN made for man, — beautiful, touching truth, suited to an age of female degradation! WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING.

You will find a tulip of a woman to be in fashion when a little humble violet or daisy of creation is passed over without remark.

WILLIAM MAKEPEACE THACKERAY.

Just so much respect as a woman derogates from her own sex, in whatever condition placed, — her handmaid or dependant, — she deserves to have diminished from herself on that score. CHARLES LAMB.

Have women, conscious of inferior strength, woven this notion of mystery about themselves as a defence, or have men simply idealized them for fictitious purposes?

CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER.

Faded beauties have this in common with time-stained abbeys and other architectural ruins, — they show to the best advantage in moonlight effects.

FREDERICK W. MORTON.

WIVES AND HUSBANDS.

Selfish husbands have this advantage in maintaining with easy-minded wives a rigid and inflexible behavior; namely, that if they do by any chance grant a little favor, the ladies receive it with such transports of gratitude as they would never think of showing to a lord and master who was accustomed to give them everything they asked for. . . . Look through the world, respectable reader, and among your honorable acquaintances, and say if this sort of faith in women is not very frequent. They will believe in their husbands, whatever the latter do. Let John be dull, ugly, vulgar, and a humbug, his Mary Ann never finds it out; let him tell his stories ever so many times, there is she always ready with her kind smile; let him be stingy, she says he is prudent; let him quarrel with his best friend, she says he is always in the right; let him be prodigal, she says he is generous, and that his health requires enjoyment; let him be idle, he must have relaxation; and she will pinch herself and her household, that he may have a guinea for his club. Yes; and every morning, as she wakes and looks into the face snoring on the pillow by her side, — every morning, I say, she blesses that dull, ugly countenance, and the dull, ugly soul reposing there, and thinks both are something divine. I want to know how it is that women do not find out their husbands to be humbugs. Nature has so provided it, and thanks to her. When last year they were acting the "Midsummer Night's Dream," and all the boxes began to roar with great coarse hee-haws at Titania hugging Bottom's long, long ears, — to me, considering these things, it seemed that there were a hundred other male brutes squatting round about, and treated just as reasonably as Bottom was. Their Titanias lulled them to sleep in their laps, summoned a hundred smiling, delicate household fairies to tickle their gross intellects and minister to their vulgar pleasures; and (as the above remarks are only supposed to apply to honest women loving their own lawful spouses) a mercy it is that no wicked Puck is in the way to open their eyes, and point out their folly.

WILLIAM MAKEPEACE THACKERAY.

THEOLOGIANS deplore Eve's taste and appetite, but philosophers give her a vote of thanks. If she had n't bitten that apple in the garden, we should all, save beggars and tramps, be out of a job.

FREDERICK W MORTON.

WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION.

I THOUGHT I stood on the border of a great desert, and the sand blew about everywhere. And I thought I saw two great figures like beasts of burden of the desert, and one lay upon the sand with its neck stretched out, and one stood by it. And I looked curiously at the one that lay upon the ground, for it had a great burden on its back, and the sand was thick about it, so that it seemed to have piled over it for centuries. . . . And I said: "Why does she lie here motionless, with the sand piled round her?" And he answered: "Listen; I will tell you. Ages and ages long she has lain here, and the wind has blown over her. The oldest, oldest, oldest man living has never seen her move; the oldest, oldest book records that she lay here then, as she lies here now, with the sand about her. But listen! Older than the oldest book, older than the oldest recorded memory of man, on the Rock of Language, on the hard-baked clay of Ancient Customs, now crumbling to decay, are found the marks of her footsteps! Side by side with his who stands beside her you may trace them; and you know that she who now lies there once wandered free over the rocks with him. . . . I take it, ages ago the Age-of-dominion-of-muscular-force found her, and when she stooped low to give suck to her young, and her back was broad, he put his burden of subjection on to it, and tied it on with the broad band of Inevitable Necessity. Then she looked at the earth and the sky, and knew there was no hope for her; and she lay down on the sand with the burden she could not loosen. Ever since she has lain here." . . . And I heard something crackling, and I looked, and I saw the band that bound the burden on to her back broken asunder, and the burden rolled on to the ground. And I said, "What is this?" And he said: "The Age-of-muscular-force is dead. The Age-of-nervous-force has killed him with the knife he holds in his hand; and silently and invisibly he has crept up to the woman, and with that knife of Mechanical Invention he has cut the band that bound the burden to her back. The Inevitable Necessity is broken. She might rise now." And she threw from her gladly the mantle of Anciently-received-opinions she wore, for it was full of holes. And she took the girdle from her waist that she had treasured so long, and the moths flew out of it in a cloud. And he said: "Take the shoes of Dependence off your feet." And she stood there naked, but for the one white garment that clung close to her.

OLIVE SCHREINER.

GEORGE ELIOT.

THE heart of a loving woman is a golden sanctuary, where often there reigns an idol of clay.

PAULIN LIMAYRAC.

WOMAN'S BEAUTY.

WE find beauty itself a very poor thing unless beautified by sentiment. The reader may take the confession as he pleases, either as an instance of abundance of sentiment on our part, or as an evidence of want of proper ardor and impartiality; but we cannot (and that is the plain truth) think the most beautiful creature beautiful, or be at all affected by her, or long to sit next her, or go to a theatre with her, or listen to a concert with her, or walk in a field or a forest with her, or call her by her Christian name, or ask her if she likes poetry, or tie (with any satisfaction) her gown for her, or be asked whether we admire her shoe, or take her arm, even into a dining-room, or kiss her at Christmas, or on May-day, or on any other day, or dream of her, or wake thinking of her, or feel a want in the room when she is gone, or a pleasure the more when she appears, — unless she has a heart as well as a face, and is a proper, good-tempered, natural, sincere, honest girl, who has a love for other people and other things, apart from self-reference and the wish to be admired. Her face would pall upon us in the course of a week, or even become disagreeable. We should prefer an enamelled teacup; for we should expect nothing from it. We remember the impression made on us by a female plaster-cast hand, sold in the shops as a model. It is beautifully turned, though we thought it somewhat too plump and well-fed. The fingers, however, are delicately tapered, the outline flowing and graceful. We fancied it to have belonged to some jovial beauty, a little too fat and festive, but laughing withal, and as full of good-nature. The possessor told us it was the hand of Madame Brinvilliers, the famous poisoner. The word was no sooner spoken than we shrank from it as if it had been a toad. It was now literally hideous; the fat seemed sweltering and full of poison. The beauty added to the deformity. You resented the grace; you shrank from the look of smoothness as from a snake. The woman went to the scaffold with as much indifference as she distributed her poisons. The character of her mind was insensibility. The strongest of excitements was to her what a cup of tea was to other people. And such is the character, more or less, of all mere beauty.

IF the world was lost through woman, she alone can save it. LOUIS DE BEAUFORT.

WOMEN AS INCONSTANTS.

WOMAN is not absolute fixedness and fidelity; but she is such compared with man. Were she a hundred times less stable than she is, he still might honor her in that as infinite superior. Love to her means loyalty, engrossment, dedication. She is liable to deceive herself; she is far more liable to be deceived. But when she gives, without reserve or stint, the wealth of her affection, she plays the prodigal to the last, unless his conduct stirs her to count the cost. The law of her being is not to swerve where her heart leads the way; nor will she, save exceptionally. Too often, however, her faithful heart is driven back by neglect, indifference, rejection; and, to shield himself, he calls his coldness or his cruelty her inconstancy. He is ingenious and industrious in hiding his transgressions, with perfidious labels advertising her ingratitude, insensibility, and heartlessness. She is ungrateful because she will not accept mere material support as the highest and fullest giving; insensible, because she refuses to see in empty forms the spirit that is withheld; heartless, because she declines to surrender, through all life, much for little, — something for nothing. In nineteen instances out of twenty, woman's change may be traced directly to sins of omission or commission in the man. Loyalty is the groove in which temperament and condition have placed her, and she runs smoothly in it until jolted out by some social convulsion. Before there was something wrong in her, depend upon it there was something very wrong in him. Morally, he is cause to her effect. He cannot shoot his arrows of indiscretion so carelessly as not to fix more than one in her extended sympathies. When she loves, she is sensitiveness itself. The lightest glance, the slightest word, the variation of a tone, may make or mar her peace. The shifting of an atom of attention or affection which she believes to belong to herself, disturbs her equilibrium beyond his fathoming.

JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE.

ABBÉ GUYON.

MAN VERSUS WOMAN.

PHYSICALLY, men have the indisputable superiority in strength, and women in beauty. Intellectually, a certain inferiority of the female sex can hardly be denied when we remember how almost exclusively the foremost places in every department of science, literature, and art have been occupied by men, how infinitesimally small is the number of women who have shown in any form the highest order of genius, how many of the greatest men have achieved their greatness in defiance of the most adverse circumstances, and how completely women have failed in obtaining the first position, even in music or painting, for the cultivation of which their circumstances would appear most propitious. It is as impossible to find a female Raphael, or a female Handel, as a female Shakespeare or Newton. . . . Morally, the general superiority of women over men is, I think, unquestionable. If we take the somewhat coarsé and inadequate criterion of police statistics, we find that while the male and female populations are nearly the same in number, the crimes committed by men are usually rather more than five times as numerous as those committed by women. . . . Self-sacrifice is the most conspicuous element of a virtuous and religious character, and it is certainly far less common among men than among women, whose whole lives are usually spent in yielding to the will and consulting the pleasures of another. There are two great departments of virtue, — the impulsive, or that which springs spontaneously from the emotions; and the deliberative, or that which is performed in obedience to the sense of duty, — and in both of these I imagine women are superior to men. Their sensibility is greater; they are more chaste, both in thought and act, more tender to the erring, more compassionate to the suffering, more affectionate to all about them.

MARRIAGE with a good woman is a harbor in the tempest; but with a bad woman, it proves a tempest in the harbor.

J. PETIT-SENN.

THE YOUNG WIDOW.

WHETHER under the melancholy or the happy circumstances to which we have alluded, a young widow is a very different being from what she has ever been before; in identity of person she is the same, but there is no identity of position; as regards society, there is no identity of rights, privileges, licenses, or liabilities. The great difference as regards herself is, that, for the first time in her life, she is her own protector; many things that she could not do as a girl, and dare not do as a wife, are now open to her. She has "been made a woman of," and is a very independent person. After languishing a fitting time in calm retirement and seclusion, having "that within that passeth outward show," she appears to the world decked in "the trappings and the suits of woe." We purposely use the word "decked," because in its most familiar sense it implies "adorned," at least as applied to the "craft" we are now convoying. We should very much like to be told, and very much like to see, a more interesting sight than a young widow when, after leaving her moorings, in proper "rig and trim" to prosecute the remainder of the voyage of life. The black flag is up, and no doubt she means mischief; but all is fair and above board. No mystery is made of the metal she carries, the port she is bound for. She may take a prize or make one; but it must be by gallantry if she is captured. To drop metaphor: a young widow is, we repeat, an extremely delightful and highly privileged creature. Mark her in society, — we do not care how limited or how extensive, — and she bears the palm in the interest that is excited. . . . A girl may be very agreeable and "all that," as people say when they want to cut description short; but it is impossible she can hold a candle to a young widow. She is obliged to be circumspect in all she says, — to weigh every word, to cripple her conversation, lest she should be thought forward; but worse than all this, she is so deuced simple and credulous, that a man with a fine flowing tongue is apt to mislead her, and place himself in a false position before he gets through a set of quadrilles; whereas with the other partner it is tout au contraire. "Old birds are not to be caught with chaff;" and old the youngest widow is, in "the ways of men," compared with the bread-and-butter portion of the unmarried world.

THE POOR SHE-RELATION.

A POOR Relation is the most irrelevant thing in nature, — a piece of impertinent correspondency, — an odious approximation, — a haunting conscience, — a preposterous shadow, lengthening in the noontide of our prosperity, — an unwelcome remembrancer, — a perpetually recurring mortification, — a drain on your purse, a more intolerable dun on your pride, — a drawback upon success, — a rebuke to your rising, — a stain in your blood, — a blot on your 'scutcheon, — a rent in your garment, — a death's head at your banquet, — Agathocles' plot, — a Mordecai in your gate, a Lazarus at your door, — a lion in your path, — a frog in your chamber, — a fly in your ointment, — a mote in your eye, — a triumph to your enemy, an apology to your friends, — the one thing not needful, — the hail in harvest, — the ounce of sour in a pound of sweet. . . . There is a worse evil under the sun, and that is — a female Poor Relation. You may do something with the other, you may pass him off tolerably well; but your indigent she-relative is hopeless. "He is an old humorist," you may say, "and affects to go threadbare. His circumstances are better than folks would take them to be. You are fond of having a Character at your table, and truly he is one." But in the indications of female poverty there can be no disguise. No woman dresses below herself from caprice. The truth must out without shuffling. . . . Her garb is something between a gentlewoman and a beggar, yet the former evidently predominates. She is most provokingly humble, and ostentatiously sensible to her inferiority. He may require to be repressed sometimes — aliquando sufflaminandus erat — but there is no raising her.

MY children, in marriage there is nothing good but the day before. OCTAVE FEUILLET.

NOTHING is so sure a cure for love of women as acquaintance with the men they admire. JEAN JACQUES WEISS.

NATURE OF WOMAN'S SUPREMACY.

"THE time will come, I trust, when women will no longer be contented with the few empty and exaggerated compliments in which men pay them off, — 'angelic creatures!' 'poet's theme!' and so on; stuff that springs from what Diogenes calls the spooney view of women, and only applicable to the young and handsome, — a very small minority. . . . The supremacy of women in this country is like that of the Mikado in Japan, — a sovereign sacred and irresponsible, but on condition of sitting still and leaving the management of affairs, the real business of life, to others. It is the same theory of government with which the constitutionalists tormented the late Louis Philippe, — Le roi régne et ne gouverne pas. He was unwilling to accept such a position, and so am I. I cannot take a pride in insignificance and uselessness, although I confess with shame that most women do; the result of which is, that we have not the kind of influence we ought to have, and that a real, hearty, genuine respect for women does not exist. In every man's heart there lurks a mild contempt for us, because of our ignorance of business, politics, and practical matters generally outside of the nursery and the milliner's shop. The best of you look upon us and our doings as grown people look at pretty children and their plays, — with a good-natured feeling of superiority, and a smile half pleasure and half pity. The truth is that men have always despised us from the earliest times. At first we were mere slaves and drudges; then playthings, if handsome and lively, — something to be brought on with the wine at a feast. Chivalry — which in newspaper rhetoric means devotion to women and respect — knew little of either when it was alive and vigorous. The droits de bottage et de cuissage alone are enough to prove that. In our times, indeed, the savage view of woman as a slave has been softened by civilization into housekeeper and nurse; but it still lingers in every man's feelings. Woman's mission, in his eyes, is simply babies; to which is superadded the duty of making the father comfortable."

LEIGH HUNT.

LA FEMME PASSÉE.

DRESSED in the extreme of youthful fashion; her thinning hair dyed and crimped and fired till it is more like red brown tow than hair; her flaccid cheeks ruddled; her throat whitened; her bust displayed, as if beauty were to be measured by cubic inches; her lustreless eyes blackened round the lids, to give the semblance of limpidity to the tarnished whites, — perhaps the pupil dilated by belladonna, or perhaps a false and fatal brilliancy for the moment given by opium, or by eau de cologne, of which she has a store in her carriage, and drinks as she passes from ball to ball; no kindly drapery of lace or gauze to conceal the breadth of her robust maturity or to soften the dreadful shadows of her leanness: there she stands, the wretched creature who will not consent to grow old, and who will still affect to be like a fresh, coquettish girl, when she is nothing but la femme passée, — la femme passée et ridicule into the bargain. There is not a folly for which even the thoughtlessness of youth is but a poor excuse, into which she, in all the plenitude of her abundant experience, does not plunge. Wife and mother, as she may be, she flirts and makes love as if an honorable issue were open to her as to her daughter, or as if she did not know to what end flirting and making love lead in all ages. If we watch the career of such a woman, we see how, by slow but very sure degrees, she is obliged to lower the standard of her adorers, and to take up at last with men of inferior social position, who are content to buy her patronage by their devotion. To the best men of her own class she can give nothing that they value; so she barters with snobs, who go into the transaction with their eyes wide open. . . . What good in life does this kind of woman do? All her time is taken up, first, in trying to make herself look twenty or thirty years younger than she is, and then in trying to make others believe the same.

INSIGHT OF WOMEN

IN that race which is now predominant over all the other races of men, it was a cherished belief that women had an oracular nature. They are more delicate than men, — delicate as iodine to light, — and thus more impressionable. They are the best index of the coming hour. I share this belief. I think their words are to be weighed; but it is their inconsiderate word, — according to the rule, "Take their first advice, not their second:" as Coleridge was wont to apply to a lady for her judgment in questions of taste, and accept it; but when she added, "I think so, because —" "Pardon me, madam," he said, "leave me to find out the reasons for myself." In this sense, as more delicate mercuries of the imponderable and immaterial influences, what they say and think is the shadow of coming events. Their dolls are indicative. Among our Norse ancestors Frigga was worshipped as the goddess of women. "Wierdes all," said the Edda, "Frigga knoweth, though she telleth them never." That is to say, all wisdoms Woman knows, though she takes them for granted, and does not explain them as discoveries, like the understanding of man. Men remark figure; women always catch the expression. They inspire by a look, and pass with us not so much by what they say or do, as by their presence. They learn so fast and convey the result so fast as to outrun the logic of their slow brother and make his acquisitions poor. 'T is their mood and tone that is important. Does their mind misgive them, or are they firm and cheerful? 'T is a true report that things are going ill or well. And any remarkable opinion or movement shared by woman will be the first sign of revolution.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

WOES OF FADED BEAUTY.

THE condition of a young woman who has never thought or heard of any other excellence than beauty, and whom the sudden blast of disease wrinkles in her bloom, is indeed sufficiently calamitous. She is at once deprived of all that elated her pride, or animated her activity; all that filled her days with pleasure and her nights with hope; all that gave gladness to the present hour, or brightened her prospects of futurity. It is perhaps not in the power of man, whose attention has been divided by diversity of pursuits, and who has not been accustomed to derive from others much of his happiness, to imagine to himself such helpless destitution, such dismal inanity. Every object of pleasing contemplation is at once snatched away, and the soul finds every receptacle of ideas empty, or filled only with the memory of joys that can return no more, — all the gloomy privation, or impotent desire; the faculties of anticipation slumbering in despondency, or the powers of pleasure mutiny for employment. I was so little able to find entertainment for myself, that I was forced in a short time to venture abroad, as the solitary savage is driven by hunger from his cavern. I entered with all the humility of disgrace into assemblies, where I had lately sparkled with gayety, and towered with triumph. I was not wholly without hope, that dejection had misrepresented me to myself, and that the remains of my former face might yet have some attraction and influence; but the first circle of visits convinced me, that my reign was at an end; that life and death were no longer in my hands; that I was no more to practise the glance of command, or the frown of prohibition; to receive the tribute of sighs and praises, or be soothed with the gentle murmurs of amorous timidity. My opinion was now unheard, and my proposals were unregarded; the narrowness of my knowledge and my sentiments was easily discovered, when the eyes were no longer engaged against the judgment. . . . Though the negligence of the men was not very pleasing when compared with vows and adoration, yet it was far more supportable than the insolence of my own sex. . . . Some soothed me with the observation that none can tell how soon my case may be her own; and some thought it proper to receive me with mournful tenderness, formal condolence, and consolatory blandishments. Thus was I every day harassed with all the stratagems of well-bred malignity.

WOMEN'S GREAT NEED.

IF one tenth of the efforts which women now make to fill their time with amusements or to gratify outward ambition were devoted to personal improvement and to the cultivation of high-toned friendships with each other, it would do more than anything else to enrich and embellish their lives, and to crown them with contentment. Their characters would thus be elevated, their hearts warmed, their minds stored, their manners refined, and kindness and courtesy infused into their intercourse. Nothing else will ever add to society the freshness, variety, and stimulant charm, the noble truths and aspirations, the ingenuous co-operating affections, whose absence at present makes it often so deceitful and repulsive, so barren and wearisome. The relish of existence is destroyed, the glory of the universe darkened, to multitudes of tender and high-souled persons by the loathsome insincerity and treachery, the frivolous fickleness, the petty suspicions and envies, and the incompetent judgments which they are constantly meeting. These superficial and miserable vices of common society disenchant the soul, and dry up the springs of love and hope. They are fatal to that magnanimous wisdom and that trustful sympathy which compose at once the brightest ornaments of our nature and the costliest treasures of experience. Ah! if, in place of them, we could everywhere meet the honest hand, the open heart, the serious mind, the frank voice, the upward eye, the emulous and helpful soul largely endowed with knowledge and reverence! Then one would never be troubled with that frightfully depressing feeling, — the feeling that there is nothing worth living for. Verily, the most dismal of all deaths is to die from lack of sufficient motive for living. And is it not to be feared that many in our age die this death?

WOMAN, divorced from home, wanders unfriended like a waif upon the wave.

JOHANN WOLFGANG VON GOETHE.

WOMEN are right to crave beauty at any price, since beauty is the only merit that men do not contest with them.

ANTOINE DUPUY.

YOUR true flirt plays with sparkles; her heart, much as there is of it, spends itself in sparkles; she measures it to sparkle, and habit grows into nature.

DONALD G. MITCHELL.

THE prejudices of men emanate from the mind, and may be overcome; the prejudices of women emanate from the heart, and are impregnable.

JEAN BAPTISTE DE BOYER D'ARGENS.

WOMEN are the poetry of the world in the same sense as the stars are the poetry of heaven.

FRANCIS HARGRAVE.

THE weaknesses of women have been given them by Nature, to exercise the virtues of men.

MME. NECKER.

THE beauty of some women has days and seasons, and depends upon accidents which diminish or increase it.

MIGUEL DE CERVANTES.

WE meet in society many attractive women whom we would fear to make our wives.

COLIN D'HARLEVILLE.

THE woman who plays with the love of a loyal man is a curse; she may close his heart forever against all confidence in her sex.

ANONYMOUS.

A WOMAN with whom one discusses love is always in expectation of something.

A. POINCELOT.

IT is the male that gives charms to womankind, that produces an air in their faces, a grace in their motions, a softness in their voices, and a delicacy in their complexions.

JOSEPH ADDISON.

IN life, woman must wait until she is asked to love, as in a salon she waits for an invitation to dance.

ALPHONSE KARR.

A WIFE! a mother! — two magical words, comprising the sweetest source of man's felicity. Theirs is the reign of beauty, of love, of reason, — always a reign.

AIMI MARTIN.

COULD we make her as the man,
Sweet love were slain, whose dearest bond is this:
Not like to like, but like in difference.

ALFRED TENNYSON.

WOMAN is the dwelling-place of religion, and communicates it to the young.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING.

THE first and chief thing that should be looked for in a woman is fear.

COUNT LYOF N. TOLSTOÏ.

FOR the hero of her worship woman has the meekness of the dove, the devotion of the saint; for his safety in peril, for his rescue in misfortune, her vain sense imbibes the sagacity of the serpent, her weak heart the courage of the lioness.

EDWARD BULWER-LYTTON.

A WOMAN fascinates a man quite as often by what she overlooks as by what she sees.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

WOMEN have no fear of marriage, because they are so occupied in imagining the happiness it may bring them that they never think of the possible misery it includes.

ANONYMOUS.

DEVOTION is the last love of women.

CHARLES DE SAINT-EVREMOND.

THE laughter, the tears, and the song of a woman are equally deceptive.

LATIN PROVERB.

A WOMAN'S lot is made for her by the love she accepts. GEORGE ELIOT.

WOMAN is an idol that man worships until he throws it down. ANONYMOUS.

SHE who dresses for others beside her husband marks herself a wanton. EURIPIDES.

WITH soft persuasive prayers woman wields the sceptre of the life which she charmeth.

FRIEDRICH VON SCHILLER.

MEN are the cause of women's dislike for one another. JEAN DE LA BRUYÈRE.

THE beautiful woman always gives me joy, and a high mind, too, if I think what she does for me. REINMAR.

WOMEN have the genius of charity. A man gives but his gold; a woman adds to it her sympathy. ERNEST WILFRID LEGOUVÉ.

WOMAN'S power is over the affections. A beautiful dominion is hers, but she risks its forfeiture when she seeks to extend it.

BOVEE.

To remain virtuous, a man has only to combat his own desires; a woman must resist her own inclinations and the continual attack of man. NICOLAS VALENTIN DE LATÉNA.

A CUNNING woman is a knavish fool.

LORD LYTTLETON.

A WOMAN often thinks she regrets the lover, when she only regrets the love.

FRANÇOIS DE LA ROCHEFOUCAULD.

EVEN the satyrs, like men, in one way or another, could win the love of women.

RICHARD MALCOLM JOHNSTON.

YOU wish to create Eve over again, or rather to call forth a female Adam. I object. FREDERICK SHELDON.

LET a man pray that none of his womankind should form a just estimation of him.

WILLIAM MAKEPEACE THACKERAY.

THE evil in women is usually communicated by men. Much of the deceit of which they are accused is the effect of masculine inoculation. JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE.

THE lover never sees personal resemblances in his mistress to her kindred or to others. RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

THE friendship of a man is often a support; that of a woman is always a consolation. ROCHEPÈDRE.

WOMAN is the blood royal of life; let there be slight degrees of precedence among them, but let them all be sacred.

ROBERT BURNS.

THE woman who is resolved to be respected can make herself to be so, even amidst an army of soldiers. MIGUEL DE CERVANTES.

To form devices quick is woman's wit.

EURIPIDES.

A BEAUTIFUL woman is the paradise of the eyes, the hell of the soul, and the purgatory of the pulse. ANONYMOUS.

IF you would make a pair of good shoes, take for the sole the tongue of a woman; it never wears out. ALSATIAN PROVERB.

ONE is always a woman's first lover.

PIERRE DE LACLOS.

A MAN must be a fool who does not succeed in making a woman believe that which flatters her. HONORÉ DE BALZAC.

I HAVE seen faces of women that were fair to look upon, yet one could see that the icicles were forming round these women's hearts. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

WOMAN'S work, grave sirs, is never done.

LAWRENCE EUSDEN.

THE highest mark of esteem a woman can give a man is to ask his friendship, and the most signal proof of her indifference is to offer him hers. ANONYMOUS.

MAN is the will, and Woman the sentiment. In this ship of humanity, Will is the rudder, and Sentiment the sail. When Woman affects to steer, the rudder is only a masked sail. RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

A WOMAN'S preaching is like a dog's walking on his hind legs. It is not done well, but you are surprised to find it done at all.

SAMUEL JOHNSON.

THE only way to get the upper hand of a woman is to be more woman than she is herself.

ANONYMOUS.

THE devastating egotism of man is properly foreign to woman; though there are many women as haughty, hard, and imperious as any man.

WILLIAM ROUNSEVILLE ALGER.

THERE are some women who think virtue was given them as claws were given to cats, — to do nothing but scratch with.

DOUGLAS JERROLD.

AN immodest woman is food without salt.

ARABIAN PROVERB.

FORTITUDE OF WOMEN.

I HAVE often had occasion to remark the fortitude with which women sustain the most overwhelming reverses of fortune. Those disasters that break down the spirit of a man, and prostrate him in the dust, seem to call forth all the energies of the softer sex, and give such intrepidity and elevation to their character, that at times it approaches to sublimity. Nothing can be more touching than to behold a soft and tender female, who has been all weakness and dependence, and alive to every trivial roughness while treading the prosperous paths of life, suddenly rising in mental force to be the comforter and supporter of her husband under misfortune, and abiding, with unshrinking firmness, the bitterest blasts of adversity. As the vine which has long twined its graceful foliage about the oak, and been lifted by it into sunshine, will, when the hardy plant is rifted by the thunderbolt, cling round it with its caressing tendrils, and bind up its shattered boughs; so is it beautifully ordained by Providence that woman, who is the mere dependant and ornament of man in his happier hours, should be his stay and solace when smitten with sudden calamity,—winding herself into the rugged recesses of his nature, tenderly supporting the drooping head, and binding up the broken heart. I was once congratulating a friend, who had around him a blooming family, knit together in the strongest affection. "I can wish you no better lot," said he with enthusiasm, "than to have a wife and children. If you are prosperous, there they are to share your prosperity; if otherwise, there they are to comfort you." And, indeed, I have observed that a married man falling into misfortune is more apt to retrieve his situation in the world than a single one, — partly because he is more stimulated to exertion by the necessities of the beloved beings who depend upon him for subsistence; but chiefly because his spirits are soothed and relieved by domestic endearments, and his self-respect kept alive by finding that, though all abroad is darkness and humiliation, yet there is still a little world of love at home, of which he is monarch; whereas a single man is apt to run to waste and self-neglect, to fancy himself lonely and abandoned, and his heart to fall to ruin, like some deserted mansion, for want of an inhabitant.

WASHINGTON IRVING.

XVI.

WOMEN have, in general, but one object, which is their beauty; upon which scarce any flattery is too gross for them.

LORD CHESTERFIELD.

IF Cleopatra's nose had been shorter, the face of the whole world would have been changed. BLAISE PASCAL.

A WORTHLESS girl has enslaved me, — me whom no enemy ever did. EPICTETUS.

AN indigent female, the object probably of love and tenderness in her youth, at a more advanced age a withered flower, has nothing to do but retire and die.

ROBERT HALL.

IN love affairs, from innocence to the fault, there is but a kiss.

ALBÉRIC SECOND.

THE destiny of women is to please, to be amiable, and to be loved.

ROCHEBRUNE.

NOT much he kens, I ween, of woman's breast,
Who thinks that wanton thing is won by sighs;
What careth she for hearts when once possess'd?
LORD BYRON.

WOMEN rouge that they may not blush.
ITALIAN PROVERB.

A WOMAN in love is a very poor judge of character. JOSIAH GILBERT HOLLAND.

THERE was never yet fair woman but she made mouths in a glass.
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

A WOMAN'S whole life is the history of the affections. The heart is her world; it is there her ambition strives for empire.
WASHINGTON IRVING.

WOMEN never lie more astutely than when they tell the truth to those who do not believe them. ANONYMOUS.

A WOMAN'S friendship borders more closely on love than man's.
SAMUEL TAYLOR COLERIDGE.

WOMEN never weep more bitterly than when they weep with spite.
ANTOINE RICARD.

THE purer the golden vessel the more readily is it bent; the higher worth of women is sooner lost than that of men.

JEAN PAUL RICHTER.

NATURE has given beauty to women which can resist shields and spears. She who is beautiful is stronger than iron and flame.

ANACREON.

To love her is a liberal education.

WILLIAM CONGREVE.

THE heart of true womanhood knows where its own sphere is, and never seeks to stray beyond it. NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE.

IT is said woman loves courage in man, that he may protect her. No, — she loves courage which makes sacrifices. She loves heroism. She loves protection, but from a hero's arm. It is the virtue, not her own safety, she loves.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING.

MILLIONS of people, generations of slaves, perish in this penal servitude of the factories merely in order to satisfy the whim of woman.

COUNT LYOF N. TOLSTOÏ.

A WOMAN of sense ought to be above flattering any man. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

THE reason why so few marriages are happy is because young ladies spend their time making nets, not making cages. ANONYMOUS.

WOMAN knows that the better she obeys the surer she is to rule.

JULES MICHELET.

SING of the nature of woman, and the song shall be surely full of variety, — old crotchets and most sweet closes, — it shall be humorous, grave, fantastic, amorous, melancholy, sprightly, — one in all, and all in one.

GUSTAVE AUGUSTE BEAUMONT.

A SHARP eye can almost always see the train leading from a young girl's eye or lip to the "I love you" in her heart.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

WOMEN, wind, and fortune soon change.

SPANISH PROVERB.

A WOMAN without a laugh in her . . . is the greatest bore in nature.

WILLIAM MAKEPEACE THACKERAY.

To women, mildness is the best means to be right. MME. DE FONTAINES.

WOMEN bestow on friendship only what they borrow from love.

SÉBASTIEN ROCHE NICOLAS CHAMFORT.

THE best shelter for a girl is her mother's wing. ANONYMOUS.

WHOEVER, allured by riches or high rank, marries a vicious woman is a fool.

EURIPIDES.

A GOOD-TEMPERED woman, of the order yclept buxom, not only warrants a pair of expansive shoulders, but bespeaks our approbation of them. LEIGH HUNT.

FOR a woman to be at once a coquette and a bigot is more than the meekest of husbands can bear. JEAN DE LA BRUYÈRE.

MEN love at first and most warmly; women love last and longest. This is natural enough; for nature makes women to be won and men to win. GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS.

WHAT we call in men wisdom is in women prudence. It is a partiality to call one greater than the other. SIR RICHARD STEELE.

AN undoubted, uncontested, conscious beauty is, of all women, the least sensible of flattery. LORD CHESTERFIELD.

WOMEN who have not fine teeth laugh only with their eyes. MME. DE RIEUX.

WOMEN generally consider consequences in love, seldom in resentment.

CALEB C. COLTON.

RASCAL! that word on the lips of a woman, addressed to a too daring man, often means angel!

ANONYMOUS.

WHY should man, who is strong, always get the best of it, and be forgiven so much; and woman, who is weak, get the worst and be forgiven so little?

MRS. W. K. CLIFFORD.

WOO the widow whilst she is in weeds.

GERMAN PROVERB.

WOMEN. — Their love first inspires the poet, and their praise is his best reward.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

WOMEN have no worse enemies than women.

JEAN FRANÇOIS DUCLOS.

WITH what hope can we endeavor to persuade the ladies that the time spent at the toilet is lost in vanity?

SAMUEL JOHNSON.

A MOTHER'S prayers, silent and gentle, can never miss the road to the throne of all bounty.

HENRY WARD BEECHER.

VENUS always saves the lover whom she leads. DELATOUCHE.

A WRETCHED woman is more unfortunate than a wretched man. VICTOR HUGO.

A GOOD woman is a hidden treasure; who discovers her will do well not to boast about it. FRANÇOIS DE LA ROCHEFOUCAULD.

WOMEN are twice as religious as men; — all the world knows that.
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

THE most dreadful thing against women is the character of the men who praise them.
ANONYMOUS.

A WOMAN is naturally as much more capricious than a man as she is more susceptible. A slighter shock suffices to jostle her delicate emotions out of delight into disgust.
WILLIAM ROUNSEVILLE ALGER.

IF a woman demand votes, offices, and political equality with men, as among the Shakers an elder and elderess are of equal power, — and among the Quakers, — it must not be refused. It is very cheap wit that finds it so droll that women should vote.
RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

I AM ignorant of any one quality that is amiable in a man which is not equally so in a woman; I do not except even modesty and gentleness of nature. Nor do I know one vice or folly which is not equally detestable in both. JONATHAN SWIFT.

LOVE thy wife as thy soul; shake her as a plum-tree. RUSSIAN PROVERB.

SELF-RELIANCE WOMAN'S HOPE.

IN these days, when society is becoming every day more artificial and more complex, and marriage, as the gentlemen assure us, more and more expensive, hazardous, and inexpedient, women must find means to fill up the void of existence. Men, our natural protectors, our law-givers, our masters, throw us upon our own resources; the qualities which they pretend to admire in us, — the overflowing, the clinging affections of a warm heart, — the household devotion, — the submissive wish to please, that feels "every vanity in fondness lost," — the tender, shrinking sensitiveness which Adam thought so charming in his Eve, — to cultivate these, to make them by artificial means the staple of the womanly character, is it not to cultivate a taste for sunshine and roses in those we send to pass their lives in the Arctic zone? We have gone away from nature, and we must, if we can, substitute another nature. . . . Coleridge, as you will remember, has asserted that the perfection of a woman's character is to be characterless. "Every man," said he, "would like to have an Ophelia or a Desdemona for his wife." No doubt; the sentiment is truly a masculine one; and what was their fate? What would now be the fate of such unresisting and confiding angels? Is this the age of Arcadia? . . . No, no; women need in these times character beyond everything else; the qualities which will enable them to endure and to resist evil; the self-governed, the cultivated, active mind, to protect and maintain ourselves. How many wretched women marry for a maintenance! How many wretched women sell themselves to dishonor for bread! — and there is small difference, if any, in the infamy and the misery! How many unmarried women live in heart-wearing dependence; — if poor, in solitary penury, loveless, joyless, unendeared; if rich, in aimless, pitiful trifling! How many, strange to say, marry for the independence they dare not otherwise claim! But the more paths opened to us, the less fear that we should go astray.

MRS. ANNA JAMESON.

IT is easier to take care of a peck of fleas than of one woman. PROVERB.

WOMEN are like thermometers, which, on a sudden application of heat, sink at first a few degrees, as preliminary to rising a good many. JEAN PAUL RICHTER.

UNTIL we know woman, we know not strength of love. In this we have, perhaps, the best emblem of omnipotence as well as divine goodness.
WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING.

A COQUETTE sparkles, but it is more the sparkle of a harmless and pretty vanity than of calculation. DONALD G. MITCHELL.

NATURE has hardly formed a woman ugly enough to be insensible to flattery upon her person. LORD CHESTERFIELD.

GOD has placed the genius of women in their hearts, because the works of this genius are always works of love.

ALPHONSE DE LAMARTINE.

HER step is music, and her voice is song.

PHILIP JAMES BAILEY.

To think of the part one little woman can play in the life of a man, so that to renounce her may be a very good imitation of heroism, and to win her may be a discipline!

GEORGE ELIOT.

THE truth is, women are lost because they do not deliberate. AMELIA E. BARR.

WHEN God thought of Mother, he must have laughed with satisfaction, and framed it quickly, — so rich, so deep, so divine, so full of soul, power, and beauty was the conception. HENRY WARD BEECHER.

A WOMAN may always help her husband by what she knows, however little; by what she half knows, or mis-knows, she will only tease him. JOHN RUSKIN.

THE pleasure of talking is the inextinguishable passion of woman, coeval with the act of breathing. ALAIN RENÉ LESAGE.

WOMEN of the world never use harsh expressions when condemning their rivals.

JULES MICHELET.

WHEN maidens sue, men live like gods.

PROVERB.

I THINK it takes a great deal from a woman's modesty, going into public life; and modesty is her greatest charm.

MRS. HENRY WARD BEECHER.

RESPONSIBILITY OF WOMEN.

THERE is not a war in the world, no, nor an injustice, but you women are answerable for it; not in that you have provoked, but in that you have not hindered. Men, by their nature, are prone to fight; they will fight for any cause, or for none. It is for you to choose their cause for them, and to forbid them when there is no cause. There is no suffering, no injustice, no misery in the earth, but the guilt of it lies lastly with you. Men can bear the sight of it, but you should not be able to bear it. Men may tread it down without sympathy in their own struggle; but men are feeble in sympathy and contracted in hope: it is you only who can feel the depths of pain, and conceive the way of its healing. Instead of trying to do this, you turn away from it; you shut yourselves within your park walls and garden gates; and you are content to know that there is beyond them a world in wilderness, — a world of secrets which you dare not penetrate, and of suffering which you dare not conceive. I tell you that this is to me quite the most amazing among the phenomena of humanity. I am surprised at no depths to which, when once warped from its honor, that humanity can be degraded. I do not wonder at the miser's death, with his hands, as they relax, dropping gold. I do not wonder at the sensualist's life, with the shroud wrapped about his feet. I do not wonder at the single-handed murder of a single victim, done by the assassin in the darkness of the railway, or reed shadow of the marsh. I do not even wonder at the myriad-handed murder of multitudes, done boastfully in the daylight, by the frenzy of nations, and the immeasurable, unimaginable guilt, heaped up from hell to heaven, of their priests and kings. But this is wonderful to me — oh, how wonderful! — to see the tender and delicate woman among you, with her child at her breast, and a power, if she would wield it, over it and over its father, purer than the air of heaven, and stronger than the seas of earth, — nay, a magnitude of blessing which her husband would not part with for all the earth itself, though it were made of one entire and perfect chrysolite; — to see her abdicate this majesty to play at precedence with her next-door neighbor! This is wonderful — oh, wonderful! — to see her with every innocent feeling fresh within her, go out in the morning into her garden to play with the fringes of its guarded flowers, and lift their heads when they are drooping, with her happy smile upon her face and no cloud upon her brow, because there is a little wall around her place of peace; and yet she knows, in her heart, if she would only look for its knowledge, that, outside of that little rose-covered wall, the wild grass, to the horizon, is torn up by the agony of men, and beat level by the drift of their life-blood.

JOHN RUSKIN.

With age she fades, — each lover flies;
Contemn'd, forlorn, she pines and dies.

JOHN GAY.

To no men are such cordial greetings given
As those whose wives have made them fit for heaven.

LORD BYRON.

MEN rise in character often, as they increase in years; — they are venerable for what they have acquired, and pleasing from what they can impart; but women (such is their unfortunate style of education) hazard everything upon one cast of the die; — when youth is gone, all is gone.

SYDNEY SMITH.

WOMEN have more strength in their looks than we have in our laws, and more power by their tears than we have by our arguments.

GEORGE SAVILLE.

THE path of a good woman is indeed strewn with flowers; but they rise behind her steps, not before them. "Her feet have touched the meadows and left the daisies rosy."

JOHN RUSKIN.

THE man who, after studying a hundred women, thought he knew the sex thoroughly, admitted on intimate acquaintance with the hundred and first, that he was densely ignorant of the nature of any one of them.

NATHANIEL PARKER WILLIS.

WOMAN'S NEGLECTED OPPORTUNITIES.

WOMAN, whether new or old, has immense fields of culture untilled, immense areas of influence wholly neglected. She does almost nothing with the resources she possesses, because her whole energy is concentrated on desiring and demanding those she has not. She can write and print anything she chooses; and she scarcely ever takes the pains to acquire correct grammar or elegance of style before wasting ink on paper. She can paint and model any subject she chooses; but she imprisons herself in men's ateliers to endeavor to steal their technique and their methods, and thus loses any originality she might possess. Her influence on children might be so great that through them she would practically rule the future of the world; but she delegates her influence to the vile school-boards, if she be poor, and if she be rich, to governesses and tutors, — nor does she, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, ever attempt to educate or control herself into fitness for the personal exercise of such influence. Not to speak of the entire guidance of childhood, — which is certainly already chiefly in the hands of woman, and of which her use does not do her much honor, — so long as she goes to see one of her own sex dancing in a lion's den, the lions being meanwhile terrorized by a male brute; so long as she wears dead birds as millinery and dead seals as coats; so long as she goes to races, steeplechases, coursing, and pigeon matches; so long as she "walks with the guns;" so long as she goes to see an American lashing horses to death in idiotic contest with velocipedes; so long as she courtesies before princes and emperors who reward the winners of distance rides; so long as she receives physiologists in her drawing-rooms, and trusts to them in her maladies; so long as she invades literature without culture and art without talent; so long as she orders her court dress in a hurry; so long as she makes no attempt to interest herself in her servants, in her animals, in the poor slaves of her tradespeople; so long as she shows herself, as she does at present, without scruple at every brutal and debasing spectacle which is considered fashionable; so long as she understands nothing of the beauty of meditation, of solitude, of Nature; so long as she is utterly incapable of keeping her sons out of the shambles of modern sport, and lifting her daughters above the pestilent miasma of modern society, — so long as she does not, cannot, or will not either do or cause to do any of these things, she has no possible title or capacity to demand the place or the privilege of man.

WOMAN'S LOVE, A REFUGE.

LOVE at its highest point — love sublime, unique, invincible — leads us straight to the brink of the great abyss, for it speaks to us directly of the Infinite and of eternity. It is eminently religious; it may even become religion. When all around a man is wavering and changing; when everything is growing dark and featureless to him in the far distance of an unknown future; when the world seems but a fiction or a fairy tale, and the universe a chimera; when the whole edifice of ideas vanishes in smoke, and all realities are penetrated with doubt, — what is the fixed point which may still be his? The faithful heart of a woman! There he may rest his head; there he will find strength to live, strength to believe, and, if need be, strength to die in peace with a benediction on his lips. Who knows if love and its beatitude — clear manifestation as it is of the universal harmony of things — is not the best demonstration of a fatherly and understanding God, just as it is the shortest road by which to reach Him? Love is a faith, and one faith leads to another; and this faith is happiness, light, and force. Only by it does a man enter into the series of the living, the awakened, the happy, the redeemed, — of those true men who know the value of existence, and who labor for the glory of God and the Truth. Till then we are but babblers and chatterers; spendthrifts of our time, our faculties, and our gifts, without aim, without real joy; weak, infirm, and useless beings, of no account in the scheme of things. Perhaps it is through love that I shall find my way back to faith, to religion, to energy, to concentration. It seems to me, at least, that if I could but find my work-fellow and my destined companion, all the rest would be added unto me, as though to confound my unbelief and make me blush for my despair. Believe, then, in a fatherly Providence, and dare to love!

A WOMAN with a sweet and gracious voice can exert through it, in the ordinary relations of life, without even knowing it, a better influence than she could by distributing religious tracts. HIRAM CORSON.

THE FIN-DE-SIÈCLE WOMAN.

AMONG the women, one wears her hair combed smoothly back and down like Rafael's Maddalena Doni in the Uffizi at Florence; another wears it drawn high up over the temples like Julia, daughter of Titus, or Plotina, wife of Trajan, in the busts in the Louvre; a third has hers cut short in front on the brow and long in the nape, waved and lightly puffed, after the fashion of the fifteenth century, as may be seen in the pages and young knights of Gentile Bellini, Botticelli, and Mantegna. Many have their hair dyed, and in such a fashion as to be startling in its revolt against the laws of organic harmony, and the effect of a studied discord, only to be resolved into the higher polyphony of the toilet taken as a whole. This swarthy dark-eyed woman snaps her fingers at nature by framing the brown tones of her face in copper-red or golden-yellow; yonder blue-eyed fair, with a complexion of milk and roses, intensifies the brightness of her cheeks by a setting of artificially blue-black tresses. Here is one who covers her head with a huge, heavy felt hat, an obvious imitation, in its brim turned up at the back, and its trimming of large plush balls, of the sombrero of the Spanish bull-fighters, who were displaying their skill in Paris at the exhibition of 1889, and giving all kinds of motifs to modistes. There is another who has stuck on her hair the emerald-green or ruby-red biretta of the mediæval travelling student. The costume is in keeping with the bizarre coiffure. Here is a mantle reaching to the waist, slit up on one side, draping the breast like a portière, and trimmed round the hem with little silken bells, by the incessant clicking of which a sensitive spectator would in a very short time either be hypnotized or driven to take frantic flight. There is a Greek peplos, of which the tailors speak as glibly as any venerable philologist. Next to the stiff monumental trim of Catherine de Médicis, and the high ruff of Mary Queen of Scots, goes the flowing white raiment of the angel of the Annunciation in Memling's pictures, and, by way of antithesis, that caricature of masculine array, the fitting cloth coat, with wide-open lapels, waistcoat, stiffened shirt-front, small stand-up collar, and necktie. The majority, anxious to be inconspicuous in unimaginative mediocrity, seems to have for its leading style a labored rococo, with bewildering oblique lines, incomprehensible swellings, puffings, expansions, and contractions, folds with irrational beginning and aimless ending, in all of which the outlines of the human figure are lost, and which cause women's bodies to resemble now a beast of the Apocalypse, now an arm-chair, now a triptych, or some other ornament.

Of all things human; it is half divine.

GILBERT PARKER.

A WOMAN always obtains that position in the world which she imposes by the illusion she can produce. GUY DE MAUPASSANT.

IT is by women that Nature writes on the hearts of men.

RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN.

WOMEN THE FOE OF THE LAPSED.

O YOU women who cry out upon the cruelty and selfishness of men; you who are defended from the storms of this world by the care of these rough men, and you who proudly defend yourselves without such aid; you who dwell as the daughters of kings, and you who fare as those to whom toil is no stranger; O you women who are virtuous and honest, — why are your hearts steeled against those sisters of yours who stumbled on ways that seemed smooth enough to you, who fell where you have walked upright? Have you defended that sister of yours whose good name has been assailed as earnestly as you have rushed to the defence of your sex when you thought it was slandered? Have you refused to believe evil of her against whom some stone has been cast? Have you refused to record your sentence against one accused till her guilt was absolutely sure? Have you not, when this last was proved, declared that guilt unpardonable and thrust the offender out from your life and from your thought forever? Have you ever stooped to help one of those who was weak where you were strong, or who was tempted where you were not, or who fell because the way to her was rougher than you have ever dreamed? Have you done all these things? The judgments which man passes upon his fellows are tolerant where woman's are narrow, because instead of the one aspect of the question which she perceives, he sees many, because he recognizes more fully the stress of temptation and the complexity of motives which lead to transgression. . . . Who should be tenderer toward a woman's sin than a virtuous woman, and who is harder? O you queens, who have with your virtuous hands thrust your weaker sisters still further in the mire; who have shown aversion where you might have shown mercy; who have hardened your hearts, that should have been soft with pity; who have turned coldly aside from these, your sisters, whom you might have saved, and gone your ways as though these were not; O you who have lifted from your heads the crown of gentleness and mercy that all your sex should wear, — are you not "ruthless" indeed? OSCAR FAY ADAMS.
